Dubai is widely regarded as having some of the best logistic facilities in the world. Its location, both geographic and strategic, is a natural business gateway between East and West and has been an essential element of trade routes between Asia, Africa, Europe and beyond for centuries. And with the current booming economies of India and China in particular, Dubai is once again a focal point for global distribution.

Its low logistics costs and superb infrastructure (ranked number one in the Middle East by the World Bank) have led to massive foreign investment.

Dubai is the world’s third largest re-export hub, and in 2011 the emirate reached new highs, with total exports and re-exports registering a record AED 431 billion (USD 117 billion), a 21 per cent increase on the previous year. A recent report from Frost & Sullivan predicts revenues from the UAE’s logistics market alone will reach a staggering AED 34.5 billion (USD 9.4 billion) by 2014.

With Dubai’s premier facilities, including Jebel Ali Port, one of the top ten container ports in the world, and Al Maktoum Airport, the world’s largest passenger and cargo hub, the opportunities for trade both to and from the Middle East are endless.

Air

Thriving Middle Eastern carriers such as Emirates SkyCargo and Qatar Airways Cargo are among the many which have helped the Middle East’s impressive year-on-year growth in freight movement, with instances of 19.8 per cent annual increases, far outpacing the global average of 11.3 per cent.

Emirates airlines, Etihad airlines and the other Middle Eastern carriers are also taking advantage of their location at the crossroads of three continents. Dubai International Airport handled nearly 900,000 tonnes of cargo up to June 2011, a figure which is predicted to rise 2.9 million tonnes by 2015, and a recently published Boeing report estimates total Middle Eastern air freight will continue past 4 per cent annual growth to 2029.

Not only are the airlines expanding, but airports are being developed to step into the global hub role, including Dubai’s Al-Maktoum International Airport, the world’s most ambitious logistics project. The airport currently operates 24 hours a day on an A380-compatible, 4.5 km runway with
From the ancient spice and silk routes to modern air and shipping services, Dubai has traditionally been a part of one of history’s most important international trading routes. Its ideal location and world-class infrastructure not only make it a cost-effective and efficient operation for importers and exporters, but the logistics sector has become a huge business in its own right. The investment that has already been made has set benchmarks for the rest of the international industry. And that investment continues to grow at an enormous pace.

Al Maktoum Airport will set a precedent as to the level of distribution and capacity and Jebel Ali Port and Port Rashid will be better equipped than any other logistics facilities in the Middle East, North Africa and South Asia (MENASA) – the fastest growing emerging markets in the world. Dubai’s location in the MENASA region provides access to a combined GDP of AED 13.2 trillion (USD 3.6 trillion) in an economy which has tripled in size over the past decade. It is home to nearly a quarter of the world’s entire population, who are beginning to emerge from a much more consumer-led environment.

Dubai’s place in this unfolding story of growth, logistics and expansion is vital. Its geography is unrivalled, its opportunities are unprecedented and its vision for the future is inspirational.
